

THE NEWSLETTER OF THE EARLY SLAVIC STUDIES ASSOCIATION

Vol. 16, No. 1 (July 2003)

<http://clover.slavic.pitt.edu/~essa/index.html>

Message from the ESSA President

Greetings, ESSA members at the end of another academic year!

As I looked over the last Newsletter, which contained a listing of the Early Slavic Panels at the AAASS 34th National Convention in Pittsburgh, I was struck once again by the large number of excellent medieval panels. There were eighteen panels spread out over the eleven sessions, which means that our success, unfortunately, is partly to blame for the conflicts many of us encountered. Just the same, however, ESSA will continue its practice of working with AAASS to keep conflicts at a minimum. I have not yet seen the preliminary program for the next convention in Toronto, but from all reports we will again have an excellent selection of panels. I was also reminded as I looked over the last issue, that in our "Editorial" Robert Romanchuk and I identified the International Congress on Medieval Studies at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo as an inviting venue for Western Europeanists, and one hopes in the future, for Early Slavic specialists as well. I had the opportunity to attend once again this year and was greatly encouraged by what I saw. David T. Murphy, of St. Louis University, who is a Western Medievalist and not a member of this organization (we are recruiting him), has organized Medieval Slavic panels over the past three years and this year put together three excellent panels that included many of our members. In addition, there were several Orthodoxy panels and a session on "Advanced Technology in Medieval Scholarship" that included a paper by David Birnbaum. Although on some fronts the news for our field is not altogether encouraging, I am heartened by the excellent opportunities that are now opening up for us to collaborate with specialists in other fields and hope that we will continue to take advantage of them.

I hope that you have all had a good year and wish you the best for an enjoyable and productive summer.

UCLA Symposium in Memory of Henrik Birnbaum

Students and colleagues of the late Henrik Birnbaum gathered at UCLA on February 22, 2003 to hold a symposium in his memory. It was organized by Michael Heim of UCLA and sponsored by the Center for Russian and Eurasian Studies and the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures at UCLA. Michael Heim and Olga Matich of UC Berkeley introduced the sessions and shared memories, at once moving and lighthearted, of Henrik, and Marianna Birnbaum of UCLA closed the symposium with thanks to all the participants. The following papers, touching on a few of the many themes of Henrik's research, were read:

- Vyacheslav Ivanov, UCLA. The Fate of the Final *-r in Slavic
- Marc Greenberg, U. Kansas. Common Slavic: Progress or Crisis in Its Reconstructions
- Henning Andersen, UCLA. Common Slavic: Remaining Controversial Issues
- Susan Kresin, UCLA. On the Ordering of Clitics in Old Czech
- Dean Worth, UCLA. The Reluctant Relics of Gleb
- Emily Klenin, UCLA. Will the Patriots Win This Season?
- Robert Romanchuk, Florida State U./U. Pennsylvania. Words Woven of Water: Again on the Slovo Daniila Zatochnika
- Jos Schaeken, U. Groningen/U. Basel. Baltic and Slavic Medieval Treasures in Swiss Libraries
- Daniel Collins, Ohio State U. Lost Times and Lost Empires: Tendentious Manuscripts in Seventeenth-Century Russian-Athonite Contact
- Jules Levin, UC Riverside/UCLA. Observations on the Pallas Dictionary with Respect to the "Phonetic" Values of Eighteenth-Century Russian Cyrillic Vowel Letters
- Michael Shapiro, Brown U. The Russian Non-Renaissance in Literary Perspective
- Olga Yokoyama, UCLA. The Logic of Socially Transmitted Superstitions
- Grace Fielder, U. Arizona. A Phoenix from the Ashes: The Resurrection of the Bulgarian Perfect
- Ronelle Alexander, UC Berkeley. Bosnian - Croatian - Serbian: One Language or Three?
- Laura Janda, U. North Carolina. A Metaphor for Aspect in Slavic
- Alan Timberlake, UC Berkeley. Substratum and Sprachbund
- Michael Flier, Harvard U. Catching the Drift of Dissimilative Jakan'e

The program of the symposium, with many photographs, is on-line: please set your browser to <http://www.humnet.ucla.edu/humnet/slavic/conferences/HB_program.html>.

Sixth Winter Workshop in Medieval and Early Modern Slavic Studies at UCLA

On February 28, 2003, Gail Lenhoff hosted the Annual Winter Workshop in Medieval and Early Modern Slavic Studies at UCLA. For a sixth year, Early Slavists gathered from colder climes to discuss their works in progress in Southern California. The following papers were presented:

Byzantine, Kievan, Comparative Slavic

- Norman W. Ingham, U. Chicago "The Military Tale as Relative Mode"
- David Prestel, Michigan State U. "Kissing the Cross: Keeping One's Word in Kievan Rus"
- Andrew Corin, the Hague and Julia Verkholtantsev, UCLA "An Edition of the Croatian Glagolitic First Vrbnik Breviary"
- Robert Romanchuk, Florida State U./U. Penn. "The Hermeneutics of John Damascene's Dialectica"

Muscovite and Early Modern

- Donald Ostrowski, Harvard "The Term 'Golden Horde' (Zolotaia Orda)"
- Janet Martin, U. Miami "Women and the Pomest'e System in Sixteenth-Century Novgorod"
- Daniel Kaiser, Grinnell "Clerical Control of Marriage in Muscovy: Evidence of Marriage Memoranda"
- Ann M. Kleimola, U. Nebraska "How the Icon of the Kazan' Mother of God Found a Home"
- Nancy Shields Kollmann, Stanford "Crime and Punishment in Early Modern Russia"
- Elise Kimerling Wirtschafter, Cal-Poly Pomona, "Literary Sources and Historical Method: The Case of Russian Enlightenment Theater"

The UCLA Medieval Slavic Winter Workshop is sponsored by UCLA's Center for Medieval & Renaissance Studies, Center for European & Eurasian Studies, and Dept. of Slavic Languages & Literatures. "Byzantium and the Slavic World" at UCLA Byzantinists' Colloquium

The Ninth UCLA Byzantinists' Colloquium (May 17, 2003), the latest in the biennial conference series organized by Claudia Rapp, was devoted to the theme "Byzantium and the Slavic World." H. A. Kelly and Claudia Rapp (UCLA) gave the opening remarks, while Barisa Krekic (UCLA), John Langdon (Marborough School), Gail Lenhoff (UCLA), and Maria Mavroudi (UC Berkeley) served as moderators. The following papers were presented:

- Speros Vryonis, Jr. (Emeritus Alexander S. Onassis Professor of Hellenic Civilization and Culture, New York U.) "Byzantium, Slavs and 'Culture'"
- Paul Stephensen (U. Wisconsin, Madison, and Dumbarton Oaks) "Byzantium in the Balkans, 1018-1204"
- Robert Romanchuk (U. Pennsylvania and Florida State U.) "Byzantine School Texts in Muscovy: Some Possibilities and Limits of 'Byzantine Humanism'"
- Nikolaos Chrissidis (Southern Connecticut U.) "Shrinking the Orthodox Commonwealth: Greeks and Russians in the Seventeenth Century"
- George Contis (President, MSCI, and Independent Scholar, Washington) "Russian Brass Icons: A Legacy of Byzantium"

The Byzantinists' Colloquium is sponsored by UCLA's Center for Medieval & Renaissance Studies and Center for European & Eurasian Studies, the Division of Social Sciences and the Humanities Division of the UCLA College of Letters and Science, the Departments of History and Slavic Languages & Literatures, the Hellenic University Club, and private donors. Call for Papers: 39th International Congress on Medieval Studies

39th International Congress on Medieval Studies
Western Michigan University • Kalamazoo Michigan
May 6-9, 2004

Slavic Medievalists in all disciplines are invited to submit abstracts of papers for presentation at this prestigious conference.

At the 36th, 37th, and 38th International Congresses, the Medieval Slavic sessions sponsored by the CMRS at St. Louis University included papers in textual transmission, intellectual history, linguistics, literature, hagiography, and archeology. For the 39th Congress, we hope that the number of sponsored sessions in Medieval Slavic will be increased to four.

Historically, the presence of Slavists at the Kalamazoo Congresses has been very modest. It is important that our colleagues working in the medieval cultures of Western Europe become better aware of the richness of the medieval Slavic cultures and to that end an appeal is made to all faculty, independent scholars, and graduate students in all disciplines in Medieval Slavic to submit a one-page, single-spaced abstract of a paper for presentation at one of these sessions.

In addition to the opportunity to interact with medievalists working in Western Europe, North Africa, the Middle East, and the Far East, the Kalamazoo Congress can also serve as an occasion for Slavic medievalists themselves to interact, to get to know one another personally, exchange notes, set up collaborative projects, and plan to increase our presence at the ICMS in the future. This past year, Early Slavists from the Czech Republic, Moldova, Poland, Romania, Russia, and Ukraine (not to mention Western Europe and the United States) were in attendance.

If the response is good this year, Slavists can look forward to these Medieval Slavic sessions every year; if we falter, we could lose ground, as the number of requests for sessions is huge (640 requests for the 37th Congress!) So if you are working on a Medieval Slavic topic (up to about 1600), please give very serious consideration to participating at Kalamazoo next year; let us not allow such a large segment of medieval culture to remain underrepresented. Again, all disciplines are eligible. Please send your abstracts and inquiries to:

David T. Murphy, Ph.D., Director

Phone: (314) 977-7180
Fax: (314) 977-3704
Email: <cmrs@slu.edu>,

Deadline for submission: September 25th. Abstracts can be sent by email, fax, or snail mail. As soon as enough solid abstracts are received (16 maximum), sessions will be closed.

Call for Papers/Sessions for IMC 2004: "Clash of Cultures"

11th International Medieval Congress • Leeds, 12-15 July 2004

On 13 April 1204, the world's greatest Christian city, Constantinople, was sacked by the forces of the Fourth Crusade. In 2004, the IMC will reflect on this event by dedicating a special thematic strand, comprising 24 sessions, to Clash of Cultures.

The Sack of Constantinople marks a true clash of cultures, as Latin and Orthodox Christians abandoned their fight against Islam to fight each other. In later years, the maxim "better the turban than the tiara", encapsulated the preference of Byzantines for Turkish rule to domination by the West. 1204 was not the first, nor the last, such clash. The European Middle Ages offer a broad forum for exploration of the theme of Clash of Cultures in the wider sense of that idea, from the fall of the Roman empire to the advance of the Ottomans through the Balkans.

Yet while clashing, cultures also borrow and adapt from each other, transforming the site of conflict into one of merger, using and adapting aspects of one another's society and traditions. In this way, clash of cultures can become transformation of culture or manipulation of culture as well as wiping out of culture. Over time, cultural attitudes and social memory change. The hero of the resistance becomes the hero of the rulers; yesterday's enemy is today's friend, and vice versa. Participants are encouraged to approach the theme in an interdisciplinary fashion.

Cultures clash and interact in every sphere, from the political, religious and economic to the artistic and literary, and none of these are necessarily separate.

Areas for discussion might include:

- Intercultural borrowings
- Hybrid art and literature
- "Culture", "race", "ethnicity"
- Definition by others and self-definition
- Language of difference and foreignness
- Illustrations of difference and foreignness
- Masculinity versus femininity
- Muslims, Latins and Orthodox in the Mediterranean
- Political rivalries (e.g. Byzantium and the West, Normans in Sicily)
- Religious division
- Rich versus poor
- Rules, regulations and laws: defining whose culture is in and whose is out
- Secular versus religious
- Social memory and reworking the past
- "The Other" - and whose "other" and why?
- The status and treatment of minorities
- Transmission of ideas
- Language contact

This strand will be co-ordinated by Liz James, University of Sussex.

Individual paper proposals, including abstracts, for IMC 2004 must be submitted to the IMC Administration by 31 August 2003. Proposals for full sessions of three 20 minute papers must be submitted by 30 September 2003. <<http://www.leeds.ac.uk/imi/imc/imc2004/imc2004.htm>>.

Eleventh International Ecumenical Conference on Orthodox Spirituality at Bose

Father Enzo Bianchi, Prior of Bose, has announced the Eleventh International Ecumenical Conference on Orthodox Spirituality, to be held at the Monastery of Bose, Italy, this September. The conference, organized by the Monastic Community of Bose together with the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople, the Patriarchate of Moscow, and the University of Turin, is dedicated to the study of Eastern Christian traditions. This year's conference will include the following two sessions:

- The Fathers of Gaza: Barsanuphius, John, and Dorotheus (Sept. 14-16, 2003)
- The Russian Orthodox Church Council of 1917-1918 (Sept. 18-20, 2003)

Scholars from around the world, as well as bishops, monks, and distinguished representatives of the Orthodox, Catholic, and Reformed Churches are expected to participate. Simultaneous translation from Italian, Greek, English, Russian, and French will be provided. A guided tour to Milan, including a visit to the Cathedral Church of St. Ambrose and a viewing of Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper" is planned for conference participants on the 17th of September.

You may register for the conference by contacting the secretariat (Br. Adalberto, Br. Sabino), who will be pleased to provide you with further information at your request. For full program, see <<http://www-1.monasterodibose.it/convecu.html>>; for further information about Bose: Tel. +39.015.679.185; Fax +39.015.679.290; e-mail <convegni@monasterodibose.it>; or set your browser to <www.monasterodibose.it>.
