

Two Rachels, Truck Driver's Daughters

Amanda Hovancik
Russian Fairy Tales, Russian 0090
April 14, 2003

Once upon a time there lived a truck driver, his wife and their twin daughters both with the name Rachel. When the girls got a little older and reached the age of 7, their parents entered them into a model search. By far they were the prettiest girls there, and because of that they were picked on, and their gowns and swim suits were stolen. The girls were sick of it so the next day when the other girls started picking on the daughters, they pinched one of the girls, bit the other girl, and pulled another girl's hair.

For a long time or a short time the girls searched for a job. The girls decided to leave home and try to find a job. They said good bye to their parents and they were off. They drove for a short distance or a long distance, and came across an ad in the newspaper which read, "models wanted." The girls got all dressed up and went to the job interview, but were turned down. They told the girls they were looking for boy models. Some time passed and the girls still couldn't find work so they started driving. They came across another ad in the newspaper which said the same thing, "models wanted." The girls decided to give it a shot. They got all dressed up, and went to the job interview. However they told the girls they were looking for girls who were in the plus sizes. The girls left and got back on the road. They drove for a long distance or a short distance, a long time or a short time and came across another newspaper which said the same thing as the other two. Once again they got all dressed up and went to the job interview. However, when they got there, there were two signs. The sign on the right said, "she who goes through this door will be famous and on covers of magazines, and newspapers." The sign on the left said, "she who goes through this door will not be famous and will live a crappy life." The two girls read the signs, and wondered which way they should go. They knew they both couldn't go through the door on the right. So the one daughter said, “you are prettier than I am so I will go through the door on the left and you go through the door on the right, and God will help you become famous.” They said peace-out to each other, and exchanged cell phones. They promised to write emails about themselves, and leave them online for everyone to read. Each day they promised each other that they would call one another to make sure everything was going good. If the day should come that they shouldn’t hear from the other, then they knew to call 911, and go and find each other. They hugged and kissed good bye.

The one daughter who took the door to the right found herself famous in no time at all. Photographers, television reporters, and magazine owners followed her everywhere she went. They all wanted to talk with her, and even more get pictures of her. Soon she was on all of the covers of magazines, in all the newspapers, and strutting her stuff on the runways. She got married to a famous actor, and they were very happy together. She had many cars, a mansion, boats, and many other things. She was rich and had everything she ever wanted.

Meanwhile the sister who took the door to the left searched day and night for a job. A month, a second month, then a third month passed and then she found a job. It wasn’t a good job, but it was a way for her to make some money. She could only afford to stay in a crappy Motel 6. She went to her first day of work, and her boss told her that she was going to be a extra in a television commercial, but they only showed her body, and never her face, and she had to wear a purple bathing suit. After the commercial shoot she went home. Three days later the president of a big time model agency happened to see the commercial, and wanted to know who’s body that was in the purple bathing suit. He sent a man to find out who she was, and to bring her to him. The man went to find the daughter, but he couldn't so he brought back a girl that looked just like Rachel, but a little shorter. However the president knew that the girl he brought back wasn't the right one. The next day the daughter went back to work and did the same thing in the same purple bathing suit, but in a different building. Rachel once again went home after she was done with work. Three days later the president saw that commercial and sent the same man to go and look for the girl in the purple bathing suit, and once again the man couldn't find her. So he found a girl that looked just like Rachel, but a little taller. The man took the girl to the president, and once again he knew that it wasn't the girl in the purple bathing suit. The next day the daughter went back to work and did the same thing in the same purple bathing suit, but in another building. However this time Rachel didn't go home after work she stayed at work and wanted to see what everyone else does after work. The president didn't want to waste anytime so he sent the same man that day to look for the girl in the purple bathing suit. The man got to building and found the girl he was looking for, he found Rachel. So he told the daughter who he was and that his boss wanted her to come with him so she could meet him. Rachel goes with the man to see the president of a major modeling agency. The president was so excited to see that it was really her that he through a huge party. There was music, food and a lot of dancing. Later that night Rachel sat down with the president to talk about this job that she could do in which would make her very rich. The daughter ended up taking the job, and became very rich and happy. She ended up marrying the president of the modeling agency.

While all of this was going on the other sister was still making lots of money and living happily until one day she went to work and instead of riding in her limo she decided to drive her Hummer instead. She was driving along and couldn't remember what why to go. She noticed she missed her turn and ran a red light. Right then and there another car came through the light and smashed into the Hummer. They couldn't get Rachel out because the other car smashed into the driver-side of her car. After a long time or a short time the paramedics finally got Rachel out of the car. They took her to the hospital and found out that she may not live. Her injuries were very serious.

The other sister was living a very nice life and she forgot that she didn't call her sister that day. So she picks up her phone and tries calling. There was no answer all she got was the voice mail. She thought to herself I'll try calling again, and she did and there was still no answer, and then she called a third time, and still no answer. So then she remembered about checking the email. So she went online and saw that her sister didn't write anything for that day. So the next thing that she was suppose to do was to call 911 and try and find her sister. Rachel didn't know what was going on because her sister took the good door. Nothing bad was supposed to happen to her. Rachel was getting worried so she ended up calling 911, and she found out that her sister was in an accident and that she wasn't doing well.

She called her husband and told him that she wouldn't be able to come into work today and she explained everything to him. The hospital that her sister was at wasn't very far away. She got into her convertible and drove as fast as she could to the hospital. She got to the hospital and everyone knew who she was. They told her that her sister was still in the operating room and that she would have to wait till the doctors were done to see her sister. The nurses told her that there is a good chance that she may never see her sister again.

Either a long time or a short time pasted, and the doctors came out, and they didn't look very happy. They told her that her sister had died, but the other daughter didn't believe it she ran into the operating room and say that her sister was just laying there, not breathing or anything. The one sister ran over to the paddles and charged them up, she wasn't going to let her sister die. She yelled "clear," and everyone moved. She zapped her sister once, and then a second time and nothing happened. Then zapped her a third time and the straight line became a heartbeat. She was alive.

After three days her sister was released from the hospital and she took her to her house. She stayed there for a while and liked it there so much that she decided she was going to move to the house right a crossed the street. The twin daughters lived rich, happy lives for as long as they lived. They were known as the twinkies.